Dear Admiral Turner:

Once again I am writing to say hello, to say that I am visiting Washington, and to ask to see you and some of those around you at the CIA. While I still seem to be involved with naval questions, my work here is pushing me in all sorts of directions -- one of which requires some research in Washington.

Specifically, I am beginning an Adelphi Paper on Congress and US security policy. The aim is to identify the new capability of Congress to influence policy and to assess the policy implications. Clearly, intelligence is a key area. Although I plan to speak with members of the Congressional Intelligence Committee, I also want to get the perspective of the Agency on the new relationship and its impact on intelligence operations and activities.

Of course, I understand that your own schedule is among the most demanding in that city of demanding schedules, and that the opportunity may not exist of our getting together. It would be both pleasureable and useful to do so however. If impossible, I would in any case still like to talk about the CIA-Congress relationship with some of those involved. Also, while I am there, I would find it helpful to meet with anyone who deals with Soviet R&D in such areas as ASW, BMD, satellite weaponry, and so on for work we are doing here on technology and the future of the strategic balance.

I shall be here at the IISS until the end of February, and arriving in Washington on 5 March after a few days in Boston and New York. I will then be in Washington for 3 weeks, or until around the 26th of March. Any time during those three weeks will be fine if it can be arranged at your end. If I don't hear from you before leaving, I will telephone your office on the 6th.

Until then, all my best to you and Mrs Turner.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read 'Richard Haass', written in a cursive style.
